SPRING WEDDINGS BRING MORE THAN USUAL GAIETY. 8

Those Easter weddings, of which we have ad quite a few notable ones within the last week, brought a bit of gayety to an otherwise dull period, and opened up a social prespect not brilliant, by any means, but altogether satisfactory, considering that we have just emerged from the sea-

Indeed, with the several big affairs ma-Strimonially that have interested us for several days past, and the numerous "quiet weddings, attended only by relatives and friends of the contracting parties," the week has been one of unusual gayety, I might say, and we may hope for passably pleasant times ere the heated term drives away to mountain and seashore the folk that make the world gay.

The Clark-Scullin wedding, of course, was first in importance from the standpoint of brilliancy. The old-fashioned Scullin mansion down on the river bluffs; an ideal place for an event of the kind, was in festive array and a jelly good time it was that everybody had. It was a match-or was it a union?-of millions, with a fine young girl and an equally fine young fellow as worthy principals, and their passing to the "set of young married folks" will be as much a loss to the bachelors and maids they desert as it will prove a gain to their the old McNair homestead, next to the ty to be in the country, and far enough from the country to be just outside the city-which saying. I wot, is neither plain nor paradoxical, but the only one I can find that fits the case and the couple.

St. Louis maids, and matrons, too, not to speak of the "sighing swain," will miss Marie von Phul, that was, and Mrs. Charles Michel that she became on Wednesday last. They are to make their home in Cincinnati, whither the bridegroom was transferred, by business necessities, about a year ago. We have had few prettier or more popular girls in these parts for several years than this young woman, and her absence from our midst will be noticeable, or I am not a good guesser. Her folks live here, however, and "Charley's" family are also among us still, so we may hope to see them now and then. seeing that railroad men and their brides fully understand the pleasure and destrability of taking a run back home over Sunday. It's only a night's ride, you know. Then, too, they can visit here or she canand there's consolation in this...

We have about closed our season of dancing the Choral-Symphony concerts are over of for the present, and the third and last conert of the Apollo Club is a thing of the While on the subject, it might be well to remark that the closing performance of this excellent organization of musically inclined persons was quite up to the standard set and sustained through all these years. Socially, the audience was just as brilliant as any that has ever assembled in the Odeon, and that's saying "a whole ment upon which we rely to enliven things St. Louisward from the fall of the leaf to the bloom of the rose, will entertain us no more after this week, and several others which won't be long coming-and then things will be dull, to use a platifude which is more expressive than elegant. We have about run the gamut of stage excellence anyhow, it strikes me, and society has been but little in evidence at the playhouses since the latter part of Lent. The Maude Adams week at the Olympic was an exception, of course. The Bernhardt week was not. The audiences that saw and heard, if they did not understand, 'the Divine Barah, as some decadent writers still refer to her, were not the most brilliant in the world, and when fashion was represented It gathered in such sparse numbers that close investigation was required to find it out. All of which, I am glad to say, indicates an increasing intelligence on the part of Milady and Company, who thereby seem to frown upon social investments that yield not social and intellectual-yes, intellectual-returns. We shall not see Bernhardt next year. Indeed, she does not want to see us. 'Wherefore, neither probably shall complain.

That vexed question of a president the Board of Lady Managers for the World's Fair is bobbing up again, and it will not down now until it is settled. Everywhere I hear Mrs. James Lawrence Blair's name most frequently mentioned for this important position. The club women, led by representatives of the Wednes-day Club and the Psdetated Women's Clubs of the State, are understood to have wishes in the matter, but I learn from several ladies who are closely identified with the Wednesday Club and its activity in the World's Fair commissionership campaign, that Mrs. Blair will be entirely satisfactory and numerously signed petitions in behalf of Mrs. Biair. Mrs. Philip M. Alspre is acknowledged by many to be capable of filling on of the commissionerships and it is believed that the car scene an appointment

I look for considerable entertaining by Mayor Rolla Wells, Mrs. Wells and their eldest daughter, Miss Maude, next winter. It has been several mayoralty terms since we have witnessed any degree of social life on the part of the chief executive of the city and his family. Mr. Ziegenhein "never went in for that sort of thing," as he himself expresses it. Mayor Walbridge made an excellent host and entertained occasionally, but, I am told, he cared little for display and elaborate affairs socially. Mayor Noonan's term was as marked as Ziegenhein's for the absence of frills in Vanity Fair. That's going back twelve years—three terms. Before that Mayor Francis—well, Katie Wagner, let's not go any further.

Mrs. Wells, the wife of the new Mayor, is a delightful hostess, and Miss Maude Wells is able to assist her admirably. With World's Fair activity coming on and such elegantly equipped personages to dispense the hospitality of the city and assume its social leadership, we shall be quite well fixed. I venture, for the next four years,

Duchess of Devonshire, I see, is apt to lead to a revival of the Gainsborough hat. In fact, dispatches from abroad state that this generous specimen of feminine headgear is E. actually "in again." I haven't been able to get any confirmation of this report from local milliners or persons who might be informed on the subject, nor have I found any great evidences of welcome awaiting the expected revival. The Gainsborough is graceful and gorgeous. It is a picture of proportion that has not failed to command dmiration, and, I doubt not, it would again commend itself to the wearers of fashion able headgear, if only a Duchess or two, or the titled heiress-wife of some bankrupt Count, were to resurrect it. The tiny toque is getting less tiny-which is to say, that it is rapidly swelling to the proportions of a Gainsboroughlet, and it will be but a step, or maybe only a feather and a little draping, to the full-fledged hat that bears the name of the noted artist.

If the Gainsborough must come, let it come. It won't make a long visit, however, and it won't make the big "hit" it made before. It will make the same big "hat," though. And what else do the girls want? SERENA LAMB.
